The information listed here represents a small selection of available food options in Karet to office workers, and requires further data collection, however some trends can already be drawn. All informal food vendors operate on the basis of fast service and almost all offer a take away option to allow people time to return to their office/pray etc. Capacity of the informal sector per sq/m far outmatches formal sector equivalents. Meals are often ready-prepared in expectation of customers. Vendors often work together to meet customer needs through supplying drinks or extra ingredients to one another. There is also considerable price standardization across vendors, with competition based on flavour and space rather than price; most vendors are busy, with small queues and those with seating are usually nearly full at lunch time. Vendors begin arriving around 10am to set up and prepare for custom. The customer build up starts around 11.15, and continues until around 1.30. by 2.30 most vendors are already closing down for the day.
